Haiti, an experience of a lifetime. As soon as we landed all of our senses were bombarded with new smells, sights, loud sounds, and a courageous people. The people of Haiti won all of our hearts over immediately. They are beautiful, full of hope, and very spiritual people. I felt very close to God being with them. They told us how grateful they were to have our help, and for us to have come all of that way. They truly had nothing. It put into perspective all that we have here in the US, and how fortunate we are to have been born here. When you have all of your basic needs met and more, it is easy to forget about God. But when you have nothing, and are truly tested every day, you cannot help but cry out to the Lord. We were all moved by the things we saw, felt, and experienced. I am sure that we will all return to Haiti again. The need will always be there and the Haitians, God's people, will forever be grateful. Joseph N Lampard
